OPINION OF THE COURT

SCIRICA, Chief Judge.

DuJann Lewis was charged with: conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute in excess of fifty grams of cocaine base (“crack”) and to possess with intent to distribute marijuana, 21 U.S.C. § 846 (Count 1); possession with intent to distribute or aiding and abetting the possession with intent to distribute in excess of fifty grams of cocaine base (“crack”), 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1) and (b)(1)(A) and 18 U.S.C. § 2 (Count 2); possession with intent to distribute or aiding and abetting the possession with intent to distribute marijuana, 21 U.S.C. §§ 841(a)(1) and (b)(1)(A) and 18 U.S.C. § 2 (Count 3); carrying a firearm or aiding and abetting the carrying of a firearm during and in relation to a drug trafficking crime, 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1)(A) and 18 U.S.C. § 2 (Count 4). Following a four-day trial, the jury found Lewis guilty of Counts 1 through 4.

Lewis challenges his convictions contending the evidence was insufficient to support the verdict under Counts 1 through 4. We will affirm.

I.

Responding to a complaint about noise emanating from Apartment J-19 of the Bishop Hill Apartments, Officer Brian Duffy encountered a woman with a young child at the apartment door. At roughly the same time, David Haley, a maintenance worker, saw a man jump from the balcony of Apartment J-19 and run away. Haley also saw two heads “pop out” of the bedroom window of Apartment J-19 and retreat back inside. Haley reported this incident to Lane Murphy, a security officer at the apartment complex, who called the police.

While talking to the police, Murphy saw Lewis and Lamar Edge leave Building J. Murphy recognized both as men who would “come and go, all hours of the night,” from Building J. Lewis was carrying boxes, and Edge was carrying a shopping bag from Modell’s Sporting Goods. Murphy observed the two men place the boxes and the bag into the trunk of a blue Oldsmobile parked outside of Building J. Lewis returned to the building while Edge parked the car between Buildings K and L.

Murphy described this conduct to Officer William Tobin and directed him to the blue Oldsmobile. As Officer Tobin examined the license plate, Edge approached the car and stopped suddenly when he saw Officer Tobin. Edge fled, ignoring Officer Tobin's commands to stop. Officer Tobin pursued Edge on foot and observed Edge jump into the back of a maroon Buick.

After a car chase, Officer Tobin, with the assistance of Officer Duffy, captured all three occupants of the car: Edge, Lewis and Rashaun Yeiser. Placing them in custody, the police returned to Apartment J-19 to check on the safety of the woman occupying the apartment. Upon entering, Detective James Frey saw several containers in plain view which appeared to hold marijuana. With this information, the officers obtained a search warrant for drugs and drug paraphernalia. Executing the warrant, the officers found two digital scales, various containers filled with marijuana, large quantities of bags commonly used to package drugs, $6,000 in cash, and a box of nine millimeter handgun ammunition.

The officers also secured a warrant for the blue Oldsmobile. Executing the search warrant, the officers found the plastic Modell's bag earlier carried by Edge as well as the boxes Lewis carried out of the building and placed in the trunk. The Modell's bag held one bag of crack cocaine, 341 bags of marijuana, white boxes holding plastic containers filled with marijuana, and a semi-automatic pistol loaded with fifteen rounds of nine millimeter ammunition. The boxes held plastic cubes containing marijuana and a large quantity of clear plastic containers.

II.

When reviewing a challenge to the sufficiency of evidence, we review the evidence in the light most favorable to the government and uphold the conviction “if any rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt.” United States v. Gibbs, 190 F.3d 188, 197 (3d Cir. 1999); see also Rieger, 942 F.2d at 232 (“We ‘must sustain the verdict if there is substantial evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to the [g]overnment, to uphold the jury’s decision.’” (quoting Burks v. United States, 437 U.S. 1, 17 (1978))). However, when a defendant fails to renew his motion for judgment of acquittal at the end of the defense’s case, the defendant “has failed to preserve this issue for appeal.” United States v. Anderson, 108 F.3d 478, 480 (3d Cir. 1997). “Accordingly, the alleged insufficiency of the evidence with respect to the essential elements of the offense must constitute plain error in order to warrant reversal.” Id. (citing Fed. R. Crim. P. 52(b)).

After the close of the government’s case-in-chief, Lewis moved for judgment of acquittal under Fed. R. Crim. P. 29. However, Lewis did not file a motion to set aside the jury verdict under Rule 29. Since, as discussed infra, the evidence supports the conviction, Lewis cannot establish plain error.

Lewis contends there was insufficient evidence that he knowingly possessed the drugs<sup>1</sup> or that he agreed, knew or facilitated the underlying substantive offenses. Both assertions lack merit.

Lewis contends he cannot be convicted under Counts 1 and 3 of the indictment because he did not knowingly possess the required items. Knowing possession can be established when the defendant has actual possession. See, e.g., United States v. Blackston, 940 F.2d 877, 883 (3d Cir. 1991) (“A person who knowingly has direct physical control over a thing, at a given time, is then in actual possession of it.”). There is substantial evidence from which a rational jury could conclude that Lewis knowingly possessed the drugs.

Although Lewis carried closed boxes, there is substantial evidence to support the inference that Lewis knew the boxes contained marijuana. First, Lewis walked to the car and loaded the trunk simultaneously with Edge.<sup>2</sup> Further, Lewis had access to the contents of the boxes. There is no evidence suggesting that the boxes were sealed or inaccessible. Second, evidence presented at trial linked Lewis and the blue Oldsmobile to Apartment J-19.<sup>3</sup> Anyone in Apartment J-19 would have known and understood the apartment to be a staging ground for drug distribution. Packages of marijuana, placed in the hall closet and on the television stand, were in plain view. Further, police found a digital scale and box of 9 millimeter shells in the dining room.

<sup>2</sup>Edge carried a white Modell’s bag containing marijuana, crack cocaine, and a loaded handgun from the J-Building to the trunk of the blue Oldsmobile. The bag was made of thin plastic material and was open at the top. A person handling such a bag would be able to see and know the bag’s contents, and it may fairly be inferred that someone walking with the person holding the bag would have an opportunity to see its contents, as would someone seeing the bag lying open in the trunk of the car.

Thus, there was substantial evidence for a rational jury to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that Lewis knowingly possessed drugs.

B.

Lewis contends there is insufficient evidence to convict on Count 1 (conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute crack cocaine and marijuana), Count 2 (aiding and abetting the possession with intent to distribute in excess of fifty grams of crack cocaine), and Count 4 (aiding and abetting the carrying of a firearm during and in relation to a drug trafficking crime) because the government failed to prove an agreement or knowledge the containers they carried contained drugs and the gun.

“The elements of a conspiracy may be proven entirely by circumstantial evidence, but each element of the offense must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.” United States v. Cartwright, 359 F.3d 281, 286 (3d Cir. 2004) (quoting United States v. Wexler, 838 F.2d 88, 90 (3d Cir. 1988)). “One of the requisite elements the government must show in a conspiracy case is that the alleged conspirators shared a ‘unity of purpose’, the intent to achieve a common goal, and an agreement to work together toward the goal.” Cartwright, 359 F.3d at 286 (quoting Wexler, 838 F.2d at 90-91). “In order for us to sustain a defendant’s conviction for conspiracy, the government must have put forth evidence tending to prove that defendant entered into an agreement and knew that the agreement had the specific unlawful purpose charged in the indictment.” Cartwright, 359 F.3d at 286-87 (quoting United States v. Idowu, 157 F.3d 265, 268 (3d Cir. 1998)).

There is substantial evidence from which a rational jury could have concluded that Lewis was a participant in a conspiracy to possess with the intent to distribute crack cocaine and marijuana. As noted, Lewis and his co-conspirator Edge knowingly and actually possessed the drugs.<sup>4</sup> Further, Lewis acted in concert with Edge to move the

<sup>4</sup>Lewis attempts to analogize to cases finding insufficient evidence to support a conspiracy conviction because the defendant was unaware of the contents of the illegal transaction. See Cartwright, 359 F.3d at 290-91 (finding no evidence in the record that defendant had knowledge of the nature of the transaction and noting the lack of evidence that defendant had ever been in possession of the cocaine); Idowu, 157 F.3d at 268-270 (finding the evidence insufficient to support the inference that defendant knew the transaction involved drugs because defendant never heard specific reference to the subject matter, nor did he see the drugs); United States v. Salmon, 944 F.2d 1106, 1112, 1114 (3d Cir. 1991) (finding no evidence in the record that defendant Fitzpatrick, asked “to watch [co-defendant’s] back,” knew the transaction concerned drugs); Wexler, 838 F.2d at 92 n.2 (finding insufficient evidence to support the conclusion that defendant knew the contents “behind a closed truck door which he neither drove nor rode in”); United States v. Terselich, 885 F.2d 1094, 1098 (3d Cir. 1989) (finding no evidence that defendant, “shar[ing] driving chores and lodging with the driver of the vehicle,” knew that a secret compartment in the trunk of the car contained drugs); United States v. Cooper, 567 F.2d 252, 254-55 (3d Cir. 1977) (finding insufficient evidence to support the conspiracy conviction because no evidence suggested that defendant knew or had access to the drugs and the firearm from Apartment J-19 – a staging ground for drug distribution – to the blue Oldsmobile. Edge drove the Oldsmobile away from Building J, and Lewis, with the assistance of Edge and Yeiser, fled from the police. Based on his conduct and knowing possession of the drugs, a reasonable jury could rationally conclude Lewis intentionally entered into an agreement with the specific purpose to distribute crack cocaine and marijuana.<sup>5</sup> contents of the padlocked rear of a truck transporting marijuana). Each is distinguishable because the evidence supports an inference that Lewis saw drugs in apartment J-19 and was in actual possession of drugs. Further, defendants in the aforementioned cases were conducting surveillance or performing a secondary function. See Cartwright, 359 F.3d at 286 (“lookout”); Idowu, 157 F.3d at 267 (“driver” who carried the money); Wexler, 838 F.2d at 91 (“lookout”); Salmon, 944 F.2d at 1114 (“surveillance”); Terselich, 885 F.2d at 1098 (passenger who “shared driving chores and lodging” with driver); Cooper, 567 F.2d at 254 (passenger who shared hotel room with convicted co-defendant). In contrast, the conduct of Lewis suggests a more involved role in the distribution of drugs.

<sup>5</sup>“An aiding-and-abetting conviction requires that another committed the substantive offense and that the one charged with aiding and abetting knew of the substantive-offense commission and acted with the intent to facilitate it.” Salmon, 944 F.2d at 1113 (citing United States v. Dixon, 658 F.2d 181, 189 n.17 (3d Cir. 1981)). “[A]cting with the intent to facilitate the substantive offense requires that one acted with the ‘intent to help those involved with a certain crime.’” Salmon, 944 F.2d at 1113 (quoting Wexler, 838 F.2d at 92) (emphasis omitted). See also United States v. Gordon, 290 F.3d 539, 547 (3d Cir.2002) (“[A] defendant can be convicted of aiding and abetting a violation of § 924(c)(1) without ever possessing or controlling a weapon if the defendant's actions were sufficiently intertwined with, and his criminal objectives furthered by the actions of the participant who did carry and use the firearm.”). For the same reasons stated supra, we find there was sufficient evidence to support a conviction on aiding and abetting grounds (Counts 2 and 4).

III.

We will affirm the judgment conviction of DuJann Lewis on all counts.
