King Remembered

by Tracey L. Salmon

I have a dream, that one day my four children will be judged not by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character. Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. (Jan. 15, 1929 — April 4, 1968)

On January 16, 1989, the federal observance of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. ’s Birthday took place across the nation. To honor this day, the Black Law Student Association (BLSA) presented a video of excerpts from the late Dr. King’s speeches. Martin Luther King Jr. won the Nobel Peace Prize and is best known for his philosophy of non-violence in the quest for civil rights, and the video included excerpts from some of his best known speeches. “Montgomery Bus Boycott,” “I Have a Dream” and “I Have Been to the Mountaintop.”

This event, held in Room 29, attracted a large, supportive tur­ mor of students and faculty, which the BLSA sponsors consid­ ered both surprising and gratify­ ing. Many students came intending to stay for a few min­ utes. “I planned on watching the first 10 minutes and ended up staying for an hour and half. At first I thought this was something I should do, and then it became something I wanted to do,” said Michael P. Gauhgan, a second year student. Teacher JL Scott Scheele said, “Dr. King was an incredible speaker. I had seen his MLK Dream speech. I planned on going to the presentation for a little while, but eventually stayed for the entire program because I could not pull myself away from the power behind the words.”

Interpersed with Dr. King’s speeches, the video featured news clips from the Civil Rights Era. Footage included sequences of physical confrontation and police brutality of the non-violent demonstrators, even as these demonstrators continued to accept blows without retaliation. Audience reaction to these clips was pronounced. “I was horrified to see the inhuman way people treated other people, especially considering only 20 years ago,” said Jill Debbie Hartley.

Martin Luther King Jr.’s birth­ day was celebrated in a variety of ways throughout the nation. Temple Law School, in an unprecedented student vote, voted in favor of sponsoring classes in honor of this great leader’s birthday.

BLSA chose the video presenta­ tion as a means of heightening the law school community’s awareness about the works of Dr. King and the struggle to bring about equality for all people. The video served as a tribute to a man who saw civil disobedience and non­ violence as the “most potent weapons in the struggle for free­ dom and justice.” Dr. King brought this struggle to the fore­ front of the nation’s attention with his powerful speeches. In showing the video, BLSA believed it could help keep his dream alive, “for it is important that we not lose sight of how far we have come in so short a time, although we have not come far enough,” said 1L BLSA member Leslie A. Smallwood.

BLSA chose the video presenta­ tion as a means of heightening the law school community’s awareness about the works of Dr. King and the struggle to bring about equality for all people. The video served as a tribute to a man who saw civil disobedience and non-violence as the “most potent weapons in the struggle for free­ dom and justice.” Dr. King brought this struggle to the fore­ front of the nation’s attention with his powerful speeches. In showing the video, BLSA believed it could help keep his dream alive, “for it is important that we not lose sight of how far we have come in so short a time, although we have not come far enough,” said 1L BLSA member Leslie A. Smallwood.

This event, held in Room 29, attracted a large, supportive tur­ mor of students and faculty, which the BLSA sponsors consid­ ered both surprising and gratify­ ing. Many students came intending to stay for a few min­ utes. “I planned on watching the first 10 minutes and ended up staying for an hour and half. At first I thought this was something I should do, and then it became something I wanted to do,” said Michael P. Gauhgan, a second year student. Teacher JL Scott Scheele said, “Dr. King was an incredible speaker. I had seen his MLK Dream speech. I planned on going to the presentation for a little while, but eventually stayed for the entire program because I could not pull myself away from the power behind the words.”

Interpersed with Dr. King’s speeches, the video featured news clips from the Civil Rights Era. Footage included sequences of physical confrontation and police brutality of the non-violent demonstrators, even as these demonstrators continued to accept blows without retaliation. Audience reaction to these clips was pronounced. “I was horrified to see the inhuman way people treated other people, especially considering only 20 years ago,” said Jill Debbie Hartley.

Martin Luther King Jr.’s birth­ day was celebrated in a variety of ways throughout the nation. Temple Law School, in an unprecedented student vote, voted in favor of sponsoring classes in honor of this great leader’s birthday.

BLSA chose the video presenta­ tion as a means of heightening the law school community’s awareness about the works of Dr. King and the struggle to bring about equality for all people. The video served as a tribute to a man who saw civil disobedience and non-violence as the “most potent weapons in the struggle for free­ dom and justice.” Dr. King brought this struggle to the fore­ front of the nation’s attention with his powerful speeches. In showing the video, BLSA believed it could help keep his dream alive, “for it is important that we not lose sight of how far we have come in so short a time, although we have not come far enough,” said 1L BLSA member Leslie A. Smallwood.

This event, held in Room 29, attracted a large, supportive tur­ mor of students and faculty, which the BLSA sponsors consid­ ered both surprising and gratify­ ing. Many students came intending to stay for a few min­ utes. “I planned on watching the first 10 minutes and ended up staying for an hour and half. At first I thought this was something I should do, and then it became something I wanted to do,” said Michael P. Gauhgan, a second year student. Teacher JL Scott Scheele said, “Dr. King was an incredible speaker. I had seen his MLK Dream speech. I planned on going to the presentation for a little while, but eventually stayed for the entire program because I could not pull myself away from the power behind the words.”

Interpersed with Dr. King’s speeches, the video featured news clips from the Civil Rights Era. Footage included sequences of physical confrontation and police brutality of the non-violent demonstrators, even as these demonstrators continued to accept blows without retaliation. Audience reaction to these clips was pronounced. “I was horrified to see the inhuman way people treated other people, especially considering only 20 years ago,” said Jill Debbie Hartley.

Martin Luther King Jr.’s birth­ day was celebrated in a variety of ways throughout the nation. Temple Law School, in an unprecedented student vote, voted in favor of sponsoring classes in honor of this great leader’s birthday.

BLSA chose the video presenta­ tion as a means of heightening the law school community’s awareness about the works of Dr. King and the struggle to bring about equality for all people. The video served as a tribute to a man who saw civil disobedience and non-violence as the “most potent weapons in the struggle for free­ dom and justice.” Dr. King brought this struggle to the fore­ front of the nation’s attention with his powerful speeches. In showing the video, BLSA believed it could help keep his dream alive, “for it is important that we not lose sight of how far we have come in so short a time, although we have not come far enough,” said 1L BLSA member Leslie A. Smallwood.

This event, held in Room 29, attracted a large, supportive tur­ mor of students and faculty, which the BLSA sponsors consid­ ered both surprising and gratify­ ing. Many students came intending to stay for a few min­ utes. “I planned on watching the first 10 minutes and ended up staying for an hour and half. At first I thought this was something I should do, and then it became something I wanted to do,” said Michael P. Gauhgan, a second year student. Teacher JL Scott Scheele said, “Dr. King was an incredible speaker. I had seen his MLK Dream speech. I planned on going to the presentation for a little while, but eventually stayed for the entire program because I could not pull myself away from the power behind the words.”

Interpersed with Dr. King’s speeches, the video featured news clips from the Civil Rights Era. Footage included sequences of physical confrontation and police brutality of the non-violent demonstrators, even as these demonstrators continued to accept blows without retaliation. Audience reaction to these clips was pronounced. “I was horrified to see the inhuman way people treated other people, especially considering only 20 years ago,” said Jill Debbie Hartley.

Martin Luther King Jr.’s birth­ day was celebrated in a variety of ways throughout the nation. Temple Law School, in an unprecedented student vote, voted in favor of sponsoring classes in honor of this great leader’s birthday.

BLSA chose the video presenta­ tion as a means of heightening the law school community’s awareness about the works of Dr. King and the struggle to bring about equality for all people. The video served as a tribute to a man who saw civil disobedience and non-violence as the “most potent weapons in the struggle for free­ dom and justice.” Dr. King brought this struggle to the fore­ front of the nation’s attention with his powerful speeches. In showing the video, BLSA believed it could help keep his dream alive, “for it is important that we not lose sight of how far we have come in so short a time, although we have not come far enough,” said 1L BLSA member Leslie A. Smallwood.

This event, held in Room 29, attracted a large, supportive tur­ mor of students and faculty, which the BLSA sponsors consid­ ered both surprising and gratify­ ing. Many students came intending to stay for a few min­ utes. "I planned on watching the first 10 minutes and ended up staying for an hour and half. At first I thought this was something I should do, and then it became something I wanted to do," said Michael P. Gauhgan, a second year student. Teacher JL Scott Scheele said, "Dr. King was an incredible speaker. I had seen his MLK Dream speech. I planned on going to the presentation for a little while, but eventually stayed for the entire program because I could not pull myself away from the power behind the words."
Isn't There an Activity or Occurrence that You'd Like to See Covered?

When we entered law school, we received the kind sympathy of lawyers and law students alike. Friends and relatives not in the profession beamed proudly, aware of our new status. You've had the same reaction from your schoolmates, haven't you? Isn't there an activity or occurrence that you'd like to see covered that isn't being covered? Isn't there an activity or occurrence that you feel deserves publicity? Is it possible that everyone agrees with every article, column, and commentary that's printed? Is anyone reading this?

Myth-understood

When we entered law school, we were given a black book, the Docket, to read. We were told that there were no assignments in law school, that all we had to do was to read the Docket. We were given assurance that this was true, but it didn't hold water. Isn't there an activity or occurrence that you'd like to see covered that isn't being covered? Isn't there an activity or occurrence that you feel deserves publicity? Is it possible that everyone agrees with every article, column, and commentary that's printed? Is anyone reading this?

The number one student in our class, so there's no shame in the princi-tive reason to act competitively with him or her. The goal of the competition in our academic world is grades. But that "healthy" competition truly becomes a sickness every semester. The sickness materializes to the library where books turn up missing and defaced. The sickness attacks other individuals. Companial relations when the outline becomes fraught with bitterness and secrecy. The sickness somehow turns us into animals around exam time:

we live to study and we study to live. We instinctively hear that which is ours and singminglely attempt to obtain that which isn't. Are goals the true objective, though? Or are they just something we use to exchange for currency once we're on the market? Academic competition has restructured to our modern instinctive natures and then bow down to the decision of others. It's just like tale's prediction for the larger world is chillingly similar: just as it is in our academic world. What is the ultimate goal by dragging down a person as its foundation, there should be a limit as to how much your opponent can only gain ground on his or her ultimate goal by dragging down that person under foot. While admittedly our ranking system has been tomato's prediction for the larger world is chillingly similar: just as it is in our academic world. What is the ultimate goal by dragging down a person as its foundation, there should be a limit as to how much your

opponent can only gain ground on his or her ultimate goal by dragging down

that person under foot. While admittedly our ranking system has been modified by the principle that one of that wealth. Yes, where people are millions of hungry, homeless people living on the streets with naugahyde jackets they used to wear weren't going to wind up as leather bomber jackets like the ones the pilots wore at the Monday morning Pentagon garbage can. I simply can't see how a country can possibly sustain such a huge waste of money when there are millions of hungry, homeless people living on the streets with no jackets at all.

When I imagine a kinder, gentler nation, I see a place where people cherish life, where food and shelter, take precedence over a false god; the Almighty Dollar. And isn't it amazing that no matter how safe and insulated we feel inside the walls of our academic cove, we look outside and see a world that is chillingly similar: just as it is in our academic world.

When I imagine a kinder, gentler nation, I see a place where people cherish life, where food and shelter, take precedence over a

false god; the Almighty Dollar. And isn't it amazing that no matter how safe and insulated we feel inside the walls of our academic cove, we look outside and see a world that is chillingly similar: just as it is in our academic world.

I envision a place where indi-ciduals that have hardship, the courage to live and the ability to survive, such as food and clothing, give me. Besides the fact that he mentioned a "kinder, gentler nation." Besides the fact that he said that pilots in the Air Force can wear genuine leather bomber jackets like the Navy pilots wear. Maybe I wouldn't be so upset if I didn't have to wear a damn naugahyde jacket. If they used to look up at the stars and think up what we would do to make us kinder and gentler, somehow I believe that

George's mental dictionary gives him different definitions of those words than my mental dictionary gives me.

Whenever I imagine a kinder, gentler nation, I see a place where people cherish life, where food and shelter, take precedence over a

false god; the Almighty Dollar. And isn't it amazing that no matter how safe and insulated we feel inside the walls of our academic cove, we look outside and see a world that is chillingly similar: just as it is in our academic world.

I envision a place where indi-ciduals that have hardship, the

courage to live and the ability to

survive, such as food and clothing, give me. Besides the fact that he

mentioned a "kinder, gentler nation." Besides the fact that he said that pilots in the Air Force can wear genuine leather bomber jackets like the

Navy pilots wear. Maybe I wouldn't be so upset if I didn't have to wear a damn naugahyde jacket. If they used to look up at the stars and think up what we would do to make us kinder and gentler, somehow I believe that

George's mental dictionary gives him different definitions of those words than my mental dictionary

gives me.

Whenever I imagine a kinder, gentler nation, I see a place where people cherish life, where food and shelter, take precedence over a

false god; the Almighty Dollar. And isn't it amazing that no matter how safe and insulated we feel inside the walls of our academic cove, we look outside and see a world that is chillingly similar: just as it is in our academic world.

I envision a place where indi-ciduals that have hardship, the

courage to live and the ability to

survive, such as food and clothing, give me. Besides the fact that he

mentioned a "kinder, gentler nation." Besides the fact that he said that pilots in the Air Force can wear genuine leather bomber jackets like the

Navy pilots wear. Maybe I wouldn't be so upset if I didn't have to wear a damn naugahyde jacket. If they used to look up at the stars and think up what we would do to make us kinder and gentler, somehow I believe that

George's mental dictionary gives him different definitions of those words than my mental dictionary gives me.

OP-ED
Undue Process: Budget Your Way to Fiscal Fitness
by B.S. Finkel

(4) Scrimp and save
(4) It's a good idea to start your budgeting with the obvious: food and living expenses. By the same token, you must remember to inhale. Basically, your only choice.
(3) Some law students head off this expense by living at home. Man now and then takes up some of these old habits. It, of course, would give you the flexibility to move in whenever you want, so long as you don't mess up the carpet or make any noise. If you check your leases, you'll note that keeping noise may be listed under noise.
No matter where you live on a law student budget, from the dingiest, darkest basement housing to a lease that is only somewhat dank, the one thing that remains is that you will be living. It's going to cost you something.

As they say, you can't live in a vacuum, I tried, but dust gets everywhere, and then there's the noise. No, it looks like you'll be starting paying rent for an apartment.

One last item to consider is the flowers. You may not fully appreciate the economy of this measure, depending on the kind of arrangements. Plus, you need to be careful when dealing with bouquets. It seems like there's a Minimum, so if you want to have flowers delivered, say 6 weeks of the famous "Peachy" bouquet from Bountiful, you need to make sure you're an American.

As for your living situation, it seems that each highlighter lasts a very long time, which means that each question you fail to highlight is the only words you fail to highlight. The amount of highlighters. It seems that each highlighter lasts about as long as the star lawyers on L.A. Law spend on library research. The person who comes up with a way to sell these stickers could make a fortune. But, boy, would that poor sap have budgeting problems.

Coffee — The cafeteria has a two-cup minimum, so if you want to have coffee at all, you need to get your own coffee maker. Say a dorm size Stagg will reduce your Aspirin, say 20 eggs.

Your friends use cigarettes as a substitute for money? Well, in law school, aspirin are similarly employed.

Tuition — Let's put things into perspective here. For what you pay for tuition over three years, you can buy:
- one 1986 Porsche Targa
- over 30,000 Egg McMuffins
- 62 weeks of ecstasy with both Bambis and Raul (your choice)
- 11 weeks of ecstasy with both Bambis and Raul
- a minor league baseball team, probably in Utica, N.Y.

(2) Procrastinate — I'll write about this part later if I get a chance.

That is that you know what you have to buy and you've wasted enough time, one thing is for sure: you're going to spend more than you should be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.

- Cell phones have become something of aHighlighters — In the beginning, you may go through an incredible amount of highlighters. It seems that each highlighter lasts about as long as the star lawyers on L.A. Law spend on library research. The person who comes up with a way to sell these stickers could make a fortune. But, boy, would that poor sap have budgeting problems.

Coffee — The cafeteria has a two-cup minimum, so if you want to have coffee at all, you need to get your own coffee maker. Say a dorm size Stagg will reduce your Aspirin, say 20 eggs.

Your friends use cigarettes as a substitute for money? Well, in law school, aspirin are similarly employed.

Tuition — Let's put things into perspective here. For what you pay for tuition over three years, you can buy:
- one 1986 Porsche Targa
- over 30,000 Egg McMuffins
- 62 weeks of ecstasy with both Bambis and Raul (your choice)
- 11 weeks of ecstasy with both Bambis and Raul
- a minor league baseball team, probably in Utica, N.Y.

(2) Procrastinate — I'll write about this part later if I get a chance.

That is that you know what you have to buy and you've wasted enough time, one thing is for sure: you're going to spend more than you

... be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.

- Cell phones have become something of a Highlighters — In the beginning, you may go through an incredible amount of highlighters. It seems that each highlighter lasts about as long as the star lawyers on L.A. Law spend on library research. The person who comes up with a way to sell these stickers could make a fortune. But, boy, would that poor sap have budgeting problems.

Coffee — The cafeteria has a two-cup minimum, so if you want to have coffee at all, you need to get your own coffee maker. Say a dorm size Stagg will reduce your Aspirin, say 20 eggs.

Your friends use cigarettes as a substitute for money? Well, in law school, aspirin are similarly employed.

Tuition — Let's put things into perspective here. For what you pay for tuition over three years, you can buy:
- one 1986 Porsche Targa
- over 30,000 Egg McMuffins
- 62 weeks of ecstasy with both Bambis and Raul (your choice)
- 11 weeks of ecstasy with both Bambis and Raul
- a minor league baseball team, probably in Utica, N.Y.

(2) Procrastinate — I'll write about this part later if I get a chance.

That is that you know what you have to buy and you've wasted enough time, one thing is for sure: you're going to spend more than you

... be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.

- Cell phones have become something of a

... be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.

- Cell phones have become something of a

... be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.

- Cell phones have become something of a

... be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.

- Cell phones have become something of a

... be the least of your worries. There are only a few other problems you need to consider:

Cards — You'll be making copies of copies, which you'll invariably misplace along with your copy card. If only you could make a copy of your copy card.
An Open Letter to Dr. King

by Kevin T. Mulhearn

Dear Dr. King,

I am a first year law student at a predominantly white law school and today marks the third year that your birthday has passed without your presence. I thank you, Dr. King, that times have certainly changed since you’ve been gone but I am afraid that you would not like them. It is at this time every year, that my mind reflects upon my youthful movement and to your involvement in it, and for many, it serves as a call to action.

The nation is still very much divided and the perspective from which I write this letter is that of a black member of a group consisting of pregnant women on welfare and men, and coming, “concerned and aware” generation. At my school, neither of these terms are classified as a member of that group and I must ask myself at a low point in the answer. Our group comes from good homes and good educations and one can truly believe that this is not, it is however, not, we are written off as the exceptions to the rule. Why?

Well, that question brings me to the other half of my “up and coming,” “concerned and aware” generation. At my school, black students are the minority. Living in a predominantly white body, making our presence here forgettable at best. Much of the rest of the student body is pretty well representative of the largest part of the nation’s white populace. The North American Black college (label them) have taken the place of the “dyed in the wool redneck” and the whites represent a large majority of the student body and those who gave their lives in the struggle for equality. They are infinitely more dangerous then Gov. George Wallace ever was, but they can be less effective, as we are all working to achieve the same goal. Bullock Carter types are still around, KKK influences are alive and well, but they are not as aggressive and racist no longer exist. While it does not surprise me to hear that epitaph from our (soon to be) leaders, I cannot help but wonder if they haven’t exaggerated armed conflicts and led themselves to believe that the most effective way to face this nation is to die like a sheep leading his sheep to the wolves.

The cemetery in Korea and Vietnam are examples of our foreign policy going away. While the U.S. was able to win the war against the Asian nations were important to the U.S. and the Vietnamese are as is a war with those who have lived in the struggle for equality. They are infinitely more dangerous than our foreign policy and their military destruction of national interests and territorial sovereignty. I do mean to belittle or make light of the people who have served with distinction in our armed forces. These people are to be lauded for their service. My concern is to fight for what they believed in. What galls me, however, is the leading of the people with the example of their service and the Give up on our work to change the system and believe in the system that this is what we fight for. I am confident that what you thought of a case cited in your law school, right, and on time. Sure, the United States intelligence admits that this gift rather than an argument on a simple summary citation in support of the radical view, “Hey, this is practice. It’s sink or swim, pal!” he said walking away from me.

Is War Ever Justified?

by Walter Lucas

Is war ever justified? When one’s land is under invasion from a people whose culture becomes necessary. Unfortunately, too many nations leap to this conclusion. War is not a truly necessary or justified. The United States of America is another example of an inability to establish desired Nicaraguan reforms.

Is War Ever Justified?

by Kevin T. Mulhearn

Our group is from good homes and good educations and one truly believes that the exception to the rule. Why?

Well, that question brings me to the other half of my “up and coming,” “concerned and aware” generation. At my school, black students are the minority. Living in a predominantly white body, making our presence here forgettable at best. Much of the rest of the student body is pretty well representative of the largest part of the nation’s white populace. The North American Black college (label them) have taken the place of the “dyed in the wool redneck” and the whites represent a large majority of the student body and those who gave their lives in the struggle for equality. They are infinitely more dangerous than Gov. George Wallace ever was, but they can be less effective, as we are all working to achieve the same goal. Bullock Carter types are still around, KKK influences are alive and well, but they are not as aggressive and racist no longer exist. While it does not surprise me to hear that epitaph from our (soon to be) leaders, I cannot help but wonder if they haven’t exaggerated armed conflicts and led themselves to believe that the most effective way to face this nation is to die like a sheep leading his sheep to the wolves.

The cemetery in Korea and Vietnam are examples of our foreign policy going away. While the U.S. was able to win the war against the Asian nations were important to the U.S. and the Vietnamese are as is a war with those who have lived in the struggle for equality. They are infinitely more dangerous than our foreign policy and their military destruction of national interests and territorial sovereignty. I do mean to belittle or make light of the people who have served with distinction in our armed forces. These people are to be lauded for their service. My concern is to fight for what they believed in. What galls me, however, is the leading of the people with the example of their service and the Give up on our work to change the system and believe in the system that this is what we fight for. I am confident that what you thought of a case cited in your law school, right, and on time. Sure, the United States intelligence admits that this gift rather than an argument on a simple summary citation in support of the radical view, “Hey, this is practice. It’s sink or swim, pal!” he said walking away from me.

Is War Ever Justified?

by Walter Lucas

Is war ever justified? When one’s land is under invasion from a people whose culture becomes necessary. Unfortunately, too many nations leap to this conclusion. War is not a truly necessary or justified. The United States of America is another example of an inability to establish desired Nicaraguan reforms.

Is War Ever Justified?

by Kevin T. Mulhearn

Our group is from good homes and good educations and one truly believes that the exception to the rule. Why?

Well, that question brings me to the other half of my “up and coming,” “concerned and aware” generation. At my school, black students are the minority. Living in a predominantly white body, making our presence here forgettable at best. Much of the rest of the student body is pretty well representative of the largest part of the nation’s white populace. The North American Black college (label them) have taken the place of the “dyed in the wool redneck” and the whites represent a large majority of the student body and those who gave their lives in the struggle for equality. They are infinitely more dangerous than Gov. George Wallace ever was, but they can be less effective, as we are all working to achieve the same goal. Bullock Carter types are still around, KKK influences are alive and well, but they are not as aggressive and racist no longer exist. While it does not surprise me to hear that epitaph from our (soon to be) leaders, I cannot help but wonder if they haven’t exaggerated armed conflicts and led themselves to believe that the most effective way to face this nation is to die like a sheep leading his sheep to the wolves.

The cemetery in Korea and Vietnam are examples of our foreign policy going away. While the U.S. was able to win the war against the Asian nations were important to the U.S. and the Vietnamese are as is a war with those who have lived in the struggle for equality. They are infinitely more dangerous than our foreign policy and their military destruction of national interests and territorial sovereignty. I do mean to belittle or make light of the people who have served with distinction in our armed forces. These people are to be lauded for their service. My concern is to fight for what they believed in. What galls me, however, is the leading of the people with the example of their service and the Give up on our work to change the system and believe in the system that this is what we fight for. I am confident that what you thought of a case cited in your law school, right, and on time. Sure, the United States intelligence admits that this gift rather than an argument on a simple summary citation in support of the radical view, “Hey, this is practice. It’s sink or swim, pal!” he said walking away from me.

Is War Ever Justified?

by Walter Lucas

Is war ever justified? When one’s land is under invasion from a people whose culture becomes necessary. Unfortunately, too many nations leap to this conclusion. War is not a truly necessary or justified. The United States of America is another example of an inability to establish desired Nicaraguan reforms.
The Best of Villy
The Blackwell Fellowship — for the Best-Dressed Professor

Some professors stand in one place, delivering their lectures competently and efficiently. These are the professors whose styles are classic and timeless. Some professors, however, have a flair for the dramatic. They wear bold colors and patterns, and their outfits are always on point. These professors are the epitome of fashion and style. Which professor's wardrobe would you want to emulate? What's your favorite outfit that you've seen them wear? Do your classmates ever comment on their fashionable choices? Have you ever considered dressing like a professor for a day? Would you feel confident or intimidated by their style? How do you think their fashion choices affect their teaching style? Do you think it's important for professors to look fashionable? Why or why not?
Best Water Cooler
Wine tasters judge fine wines by taking a little into their mouths and swishing it around on their palate before spitting it out. All too often, that is how we drink water, depending on the water cooler. At certain coolers, however, we can drink deeply. Which ones?

Best Copy Machine — Most Likely to be Functional
There's an old witicism, Xerox never comes up with anything original. With the law school copy machines, we sometimes get copies so original you wouldn't be able to match them up with the page they were copied from. Other times, the machine is on unabiblical. Often it's quicker, when you want a copy of a case, to send away to Harriusburg for the original transcript. But fortunately, there are some machines that copy better than Rich Little. Which is the best?

Best Cafeteria Bargain
Say what you want about the food in the cafeteria, there are food values there which can't be had in, say, the vending room. Which snack, entree, beverage, dessert, edible gives you the most for your money?

Best Alteration of a 'Please Bus Your Own Tray' Sign
As suddenly as they arrived, these signs disappeared. They may have been cleared from the tables, but not from our memories. Foremost in our memories is, of course, the varied editing efforts and artistic alterations updating the original slogan. You should doubtless still recall one or two good ones.

Most Eagerly-Awaited VLS Club/SBA Function
Some functions are traditional. Others are fun. Lots of events are scheduled by clubs or sponsored by the SBA which you may be looking forward to right now. Talk to your SBA rep. If you are familiar, write it down.

Favorite Cafeteria Entree
Some foods in the caf sit better than others. Some are surprisingly palatable, worthy of a place of honor on any brown plastic tray. Since Taste is in the buds of the taster, share with us your own budding preference.

Favorite Student Lounge TV Show
In between classes, knots of students gather in front of the two large-screen TV's in the lounge, paying closer attention than they did to their professor just twenty minutes earlier. What show is the object of their attention? (Note: this is probably as close as you'll ever get to Neilsen, so answer carefully.)

Favorite Beer Brand to Serve at a TG
Favorite brand for kegs that run out too fast. Must be cheap — not something you would use to have a beer and hang out. This is one I'm sure most of you have researched pretty thoroughly by now.

Best Local Watering Hole
Okay, okay, a watering hole is really just another name for a place to have a beer and hang out. This is one I'm sure most of you have researched pretty thoroughly by now.

Best Place to Dance
Best public place, so don't go putting something like in your living room, unless you hold open houses with a DJ. This requires a good dance floor, music, and crowd. In this area, you might have to settle for two out of three ain't bad.

Best Place to Meet People You Already Know
If you want to get together with your crowd, the best place to meet up to start an evening, or to end an evening, or both.

Best Place to Meet People You Don't Already Know
If you want to get together but don't already have a crowd or have misplaced them or are avoiding them, and you want to meet someone new, or at least someone you won't see Monday morning in Property, where do you go?

Best Copy Machine — Most Likely to be Functional
Some functions are traditional. Others are fun. Lots of events are scheduled by clubs or sponsored by the SBA which you may be looking forward to even now. If you aren't familiar with these functions you may be looking forward to right now, talk to your SBA rep. If you are familiar, write it down.

Favorite Cafeteria Entree
Some foods in the caf sit better than others. Some are surprisingly palatable, worthy of a place of honor on any brown plastic tray. Since Taste is in the buds of the taster, share with us your own budding preference.

Favorite Student Lounge TV Show
In between classes, knots of students gather in front of the two large-screen TV's in the lounge, paying closer attention than they did to their professor just twenty minutes earlier. What show is the object of their attention? (Note: this is probably as close as you'll ever get to Neilsen, so answer carefully.)

Favorite Beer Brand to Serve at a TG
Favorite brand for kegs that run out too fast. Must be cheap — not something you would use to have a beer and hang out. This is one I'm sure most of you have researched pretty thoroughly by now.

Best Local Watering Hole
Okay, okay, a watering hole is really just another name for a place to have a beer and hang out. This is one I'm sure most of you have researched pretty thoroughly by now.

Best Place to Dance
Best public place, so don't go putting something like in your living room, unless you hold open houses with a DJ. This requires a good dance floor, music, and crowd. In this area, you might have to settle for two out of three ain't bad.

Best Place to Meet People You Already Know
If you want to get together with your crowd, the best place to meet up to start an evening, or to end an evening, or both.

Best Place to Meet People You Don't Already Know
If you want to get together but don't already have a crowd or have misplaced them or are avoiding them, and you want to meet someone new, or at least someone you won't see Monday morning in Property, where do you go?

Best Copy Machine — Most Likely to be Functional
Some functions are traditional. Others are fun. Lots of events are scheduled by clubs or sponsored by the SBA which you may be looking forward to even now. If you aren't familiar with these functions you may be looking forward to right now, talk to your SBA rep. If you are familiar, write it down.

Favorite Cafeteria Entree
Some foods in the caf sit better than others. Some are surprisingly palatable, worthy of a place of honor on any brown plastic tray. Since Taste is in the buds of the taster, share with us your own budding preference.

Favorite Student Lounge TV Show
In between classes, knots of students gather in front of the two large-screen TV's in the lounge, paying closer attention than they did to their professor just twenty minutes earlier. What show is the object of their attention? (Note: this is probably as close as you'll ever get to Neilsen, so answer carefully.)

Favorite Beer Brand to Serve at a TG
Favorite brand for kegs that run out too fast. Must be cheap — not something you would use to have a beer and hang out. This is one I'm sure most of you have researched pretty thoroughly by now.

Best Local Watering Hole
Okay, okay, a watering hole is really just another name for a place to have a beer and hang out. This is one I'm sure most of you have researched pretty thoroughly by now.

Best Place to Dance
Best public place, so don't go putting something like in your living room, unless you hold open houses with a DJ. This requires a good dance floor, music, and crowd. In this area, you might have to settle for two out of three ain't bad.

Best Place to Meet People You Already Know
If you want to get together with your crowd, the best place to meet up to start an evening, or to end an evening, or both.

Best Place to Meet People You Don't Already Know
If you want to get together but don't already have a crowd or have misplaced them or are avoiding them, and you want to meet someone new, or at least someone you won't see Monday morning in Property, where do you go?
The Best of Villy
OP-ED

Stream of Unconsciousness

by Suzanne Bender

'The loathsome couch where my uncle sits, gazing over a lettered book. A sense of awe, of well-being, of summer warmth pervades my memory. That robust reality makes a ghost of the present. The mirror briefly with brilliance; a blemish has entered the room and bums against the ceiling. Everything is as it should be, nothing will ever change. Nobody will ever die." (V. Nabokov, Speak Memory)

Tuesday, Jan. 23, 11:25 p.m.

Here I sit, alone in my perfect moment, as I did shortly after Thanksgiving, in Gainesville, in 1966, wondering if Ted Bundy would die in the morning. Gainesville's proximity to Stark, where Bundy lives in a Florida prison cell, lent an eeriness to a dark room in which I pretended to sleep. I have always had trouble falling asleep. My watch ticked. I listened intensely, trying to pick rhythms. Blindly, I turned the dial of a transistor radio. The voice of a Chicagoan revealed the below-freezing temperatures in his city:

"...the leathern couch where my memory. That robust reality

"...the leathern couch where my memory. That robust reality..."

Suzanne was his response:

"Dear Suzanne,

A local man and his wife wished

A local man and his wife wished

The Gators beat FSU.

The Gators beat FSU.

Dr. Michael J. R. L. M. is an expert in the field of capital punishment. He is a professor at the University of Florida and has written extensively on the topic. His latest book, Capital Punishment: A Critical Appraisal, is a comprehensive analysis of the moral, legal, and social implications of the death penalty. In his work, Dr. L. M. challenges the traditional justifications for executions, such as retribution, deterrence, and rehabilitation, and argues for a more humane and just approach to dealing with violent offenders. He believes that the death penalty is counterproductive and that other forms of punishment are more effective in deterring crime. Dr. L. M. encourages policymakers and the public to consider the alternatives and to reevaluate our approach to criminal justice.
FEATURES

Legitima Verba

by Scott A. Cronin

Some men are heterosexual, some men are homosexual, some are bisexual, and there are those men who don’t think of sex at all— they become lawyers.

—Woody Allen from Love and Death

Lex aliquando sequitur aquaeptam. Lex citius tolerata vult privatum damnun quam publicum malum.

—Coke

Lex neminem cogit ad impossibilia.

The doctors seek all the weaknesses of mankind, the lawyers all the wickedness, and the theologian all the stupidity.

—Schopenhauer

Five great intellectual professions have hitherto existed in every civilized nation: the soldier’s to defend it; the pastor’s to teach it; the physician’s to keep it in health; the lawyer’s to enforce justice in it; and the merchant’s to provide for it; and the duty of all these men is, on due occasion to die for it.

—Ruskin

Crime and punishment grow out of one stem. Punishment is a fruit, that, unsuspected, ripens within the flower pleasure that concealed it.

—Emerson

Qui a vu la cou, a vu du monde, ce qu'il a de plus, beau, le plus specieux, et le plus orne; qui meprise la cour apres l'avoir vous mespris le monde.

—La Bruyere

The court, nor cart, I like, nor loathe.

Exremes are counted worst of all.

The golden mean bewtween them both Dost surest sit, and fears no fall.

—Old Ballad

Conscience is the chamber of justice.

—Origen

[That may be so, Origen; but, often is it not an empty chamber?]

Suum cuique tribue, ea denum summum iiustitiae est.

—Cicero

In a thousand pounds of law there is not one ounce of love.

COUNSELOR AT LARGE

Dear C.L.,

I am confused. On my first semester property exam I answered the future interest question in the form of a hauk. Given that a hauk is a three line, fourteen syllable literary piece, how could I have adequately hit all the issues without succumbing to poetic injustice? What grade can I expect?

Dear C.L.,

A Vested Interest

Dear Vested Interest,

There was once a student who had Lenny, who studied plenty and yearly, as hard as the 1L tried. Lenny wasn’t satisfied, and the C’s he would give out a many n.h. C.L. cannot refrain from responding in poetic fashion. Hope your haiku was better than this limerick.

Dear C.L.,

Can you give me the low down on the Barrister’s Ball? Is this the Gary High prom?

Dear Ball Belle,

I would not be able to differentiate between the fervor surrounding the high school prom, and that surrounding the law school prom. Flashbacks from yesterday still haunt me as grown men and women regress to a pubescent-like mentality. But never fear, there’s no need to make arrangements with your local RTD (Rent for transvestite, homosexual/boutique), or stock up on Kodak film for those all too uncomfortable forced photos. Given the date of the ball, I would have a difficult time resurrecting that old prom dress, unless, God forbid, it is Kelly Green. Once you go back to traditional folk music you may be surprised to actually find yourself on the cutting edge of a contemporary wave of new music which reaches back to the folk tradition. Catch the wave! See a folk show, its not just for farmboys anymore.

Dear Ball Belle,

I have a hard time understanding how you might not be able to differentiate between the fervor surrounding the high school prom, and that surrounding the law school prom. Flashbacks from yesterday still haunt me as grown men and women regress to a pubescent like mentality. But never fear, there’s no need to make arrangements with your local RTD (Rent for transvestite, homosexual/boutique), or stock up on Kodak film for those all too uncomfortable forced photos. Given the date of the ball, I would have a difficult time resurrecting that old prom dress, unless, God forbid, it is Kelly Green. Once you go back to traditional folk music you may be surprised to actually find yourself on the cutting edge of a contemporary wave of new music which reaches back to the folk tradition. Catch the wave! See a folk show, its not just for farmboys anymore.

Dear C.L.,

I am confused. On my first semester property exam I answered the future interest question in the form of a hauk. Given that a hauk is a three line, fourteen syllable literary piece, how could I have adequately hit all the issues without succumbing to poetic injustice? What grade can I expect?

Dear C.L.,

A Vested Interest

Dear Vested Interest,

There was once a student who had Lenny, who studied plenty and yearly, as hard as the 1L tried. Lenny wasn’t satisfied, and the C’s he would give out a many n.h. C.L. cannot refrain from responding in poetic fashion. Hope your haiku was better than this limerick.

Dear C.L.,

Can you give me the low down on the Barrister’s Ball? Is this the Gary High prom?

Dear Ball Belle,

I would not be able to differentiate between the fervor surrounding the high school prom, and that surrounding the law school prom. Flashbacks from yesterday still haunt me as grown men and women regress to a pubescent-like mentality. But never fear, there’s no need to make arrangements with your local RTD (Rent for transvestite, homosexual/boutique), or stock up on Kodak film for those all too uncomfortable forced photos. Given the date of the ball, I would have a difficult time resurrecting that old prom dress, unless, God forbid, it is Kelly Green. Once you go back to traditional folk music you may be surprised to actually find yourself on the cutting edge of a contemporary wave of new music which reaches back to the folk tradition. Catch the wave! See a folk show, its not just for farmboys anymore.

Dear Ball Belle,
FEBRUARY 1989 THE DOCKET Page 11

THE CAREY HIGH SOCIAL

New Years Greetings ... Hey 19th Graders, less than 4 months until graduation. Let the festivities begin. Here’s some overdue news left over from last semester. First, the 19th Graduates -- official hosts of our very own Club Night. This Club night was regulars, 31's D.P., A.F., J.T., and others. Absolutely, a message in the room simulated to look like a law office. The judges watch "clients," how they analyze the "case." The real party began much later through a one-way mirror. The judges consider how well the "client" and "attorney" takes place in the "office." Meanwhile, M.H. and K.R. were ed at Friendly's. It was nice to see together our favorite two-somes: C.L. and W.Q., D.R. and S.C.? , and possibly even B.B. and L.H. Who says IL’s are studying too much? We keep everyone happy. M.M. and A.R. seem to be hitting the dance floor at least a frequent site in the library ... stay tuned.

Christmas break does not seem to be breaking up many of the IL class couples. It is so reassuring to return from break to and to still have our favorite couples: C.L. and W.Q., D.R. and S.C.? , and possibly even B.B. and L.H. Who says "clients" are studying too much? We keep everyone happy. M.M. and A.R. seem to be hitting the dance floor at least a frequent site in the library ... stay tuned.

The cross class lines with IL A.S. and his 2L sweet heart and for her IL M.R. and his 2L honey. And just what is the story with IL R.S. and 2L Tuesday 1/17 found mess of VLS people at Marilla's until the wee hours. It seems that some guy came to strip for a bachelorette party, and 3L's CB and DE jumped upon their table for a quick thrill. Screams and cheers echoed from behind their booth and it wasn't for their waiter. Words hit it that he was happy to get out of the bar alive and with the family jewels intact. The SBA hosted the Annual Holiday Party on Wednesday, December 7, at the cafeteria. A good turnout and a good time resulted. We hope that this party helped to ease you into exam preparation, and that both your exams and break were satisfying. At the start of the Spring semester, SBA had many issues to address. First, the sweatshirt shipment was unfortunately delayed, but did finally arrive. Sweatsuits can currently be purchased in the SBA office. An additional show will be ready for delivery by February 10 and we will begin taking orders on Monday, January 30. The show is a spoof and sendup of law school in general and Villanova specifically. Anyone interested in participating, please leave a note in the SBA office.

The SBA held the Spring Budget meeting on Monday, January 30. All student organizations had to submit proposed budgets for review and a final determination. The first TG of the semester was held on Friday, January 19. It was a major success, only 1 person was clouded by the fact that the beer ran out early for it is just that our memories are clouded because we consumed too much beer.

We hope to hold more social events this semester with your support.

Counseling Competition Commences

Continued from page 1

Registration Day, 1989 — or was it '88?

SBA Notes

by yolanda F. Pagano

The class was reorganized by the response to our Toys for Tots Drive in the month of December. Students, staff, and faculty all showed the true spirit of Christmas by giving generously. We collected over 200 toys which were then picked up by the U.S. Marine Corps and distributed to many young children.

The SBA hosted the Annual Holiday Party on Wednesday, December 7, at the cafeteria. A good turnout and a good time resulted. We hope that this party helped to ease you into exam preparation, and that both your exams and break were satisfying. At the start of the Spring semester, SBA had many issues to address. First, the sweatshirt shipment was unfortunately delayed, but did finally arrive. Sweatsuits can currently be purchased in the SBA office. An additional show will be ready for delivery by February 10 and we will begin taking orders on Monday, January 30. The show is a spoof and sendup of law school in general and Villanova specifically. Anyone interested in participating, please leave a note in the SBA office.

The SBA held the Spring Budget meeting on Monday, January 30. All student organizations had to submit proposed budgets for review and a final determination. The first TG of the semester was held on Friday, January 19. It was a major success, only 1 person was clouded by the fact that the beer ran out early for it is just that our memories are clouded because we consumed too much beer.

We hope to hold more social events this semester with your support.

Counseling Competition Commences

Continued from page 1

'teacher' and 'attorney' takes place in a way that the students can understand. The judges are supposed to act as the 'clients,' but they analyze the questions as they go. The judges' role is to guide the students as they go through the exam. The judges must answer any questions the students have, and they must focus on the student's strengths, such as their writing skills or their analytical abilities, as well as their weaknesses. The judges must ensure that the students are comfortable with the material, and they must help the students to think critically about the cases.

The winners of the intercollegiate competition will represent VLS in the Regional Competition on March 4 and 5, 1989, at Delaware Law School. The finalists in the Regional Competition will represent their school at the National U.S. and Canadian Competition sponsored by the ABA. This year the finals will be held in Maryland at the University of Baltimore.

The ABA has also created a new position, the "client," which allows students to act as the "client." This role is designed to give the students more practice in answering exam questions and in analyzing problems and advising counseling clients. The ABA believes that the ability to counsel should be emphasized as part of any meaningful law school curriculum. The Competition has always been well-received at VLS, and it gives the students practical experience relevant to their future careers.

Contact Campus Representative Tammy Pernie, Sheila Anderson, Matthew Reale.

Special "Early" Bar Review Registration For First and Second Year Students — Submit $50

PMBR Tuition Deposit and Receive Any 3 finals FREE!
The Slapster

SPORTS

86 Rule 42

Academic standards are probably the last thing on any athlete's mind when he is on the court or field.

Academic standards are the only thing on any athlete's mind when he is on the court or field. By putting academic standards above the need for athletic success, the NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more

than just their sport. The NCAA

forces athletes to consider more