SPORTS AND ENTERTAINMENT LAW SYMPOSIUM TO BRING HARDING AND KERRIGAN
"Sports, Entertainment, and the Penal System"

by Jeff Gillooly

The Sports and Entertainment Law Forum confirms that Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding will be the focus of next year's symposium on the sports and entertainment industry's relationship with the penal system. The symposium, which has yet to be officially scheduled, is believed to take place sometime in late April.

This will be the first time since the Olympics that Kerrigan and Harding will be face to face. Editor-in-Chief Rhett Traband noted that there were some problems in getting Kerrigan and Harding together. "First off, Tonya wanted to sit next to Nancy, but Nancy said no. Then Nancy wouldn't come because the said it was too cold and that it would be the stupidest thing she's ever done. We had to sign an agreement that prohibited any mention of Disney World or the name Mickey throughout the symposium." Traband further commented that security would be tight as three extra guards were being flown in from Oregon to add to existing Villanova security.

Two other panelists are scheduled to appear pending panel bearings. Both Mike Tyson and Rick James have agreed to appear at the symposium, although both are incarcerated at this point in time. Managing Editor Dave Storm actually visited the two prisoners at their respective institutions to discuss the symposium. Storm commented that "Rick James was extremely excited, and was curious about any new laws regarding the legality of bondage in regards to his. Not really, for a friend."

Mike Tyson, on the other hand, was much more difficult. At first Tyson demanded $12 million if he won or $2 million if he lost. Once Storm explained that he would not be fighting Harding and Kerrigan, he was much less enthusiastic. It took the addition of Don King and the moderator of the symposium for Tyson to sign.

Not only did King get Tyson to appear, but King also negotiated a pay-per-view contract for the event. King believes that the symposium could get millions of viewers at only $19.95, which would result in millions of dollars for him, and of course, a small cut for the law school. King has already signed on the Club as a sponsor for obvious reasons, and plans to introduce a new line of Nancy Kerrigan commando dolls during the event.

Traband stated that any money brought in from the TV contract would be used to build an indoor driving range and putting green off the Sports and Entertainment law forum office. "Golf is like law school, it takes extreme concentration and the calmest of nerves in order to succeed. I think all law students would benefit from such a facility. I know I would!"

Even though the event is taking place at the law school, the school has decided to purchase the event for the televisions in the lounge. "The SBA officials noted that this was so all the undergraduate students who come into the lounge. (even though the lounge is exclusively for law students) may come in and watch the event and then leave their pizza boxes, candy wrappers, and soda cans all over the place as they always do, with absolutely no respect for those people who honor the lounge. Only occasionally breaking down to drink out of a random trophy.

Tickets will go on sale at the Registrar's office in late March at $40 a ticket, and are expected to go quickly. Many students have expressed that they intend to camp out if necessary to get good seats. More information will made available the details are worked out between the partners, and the event comes closer to production.

Traband added, "This is just the type of hard-edged, breaking issue in the law which will propel the forum up to the status it deserves as a well-respected publication. This is the type of event that reeks of newsworthiness and legal prowess. I cannot think of a more well deserving topic that should be addressed by the forum. Besides, I am still pushing my puts to the left, and if I don't get rid of my slice, I'll never make the PGA tour."

School to enforce no exit sign at parking lot through alternative measures

by Krusty the Klown

The law school administration announced yesterday that it would be adding a number of more drastic measures to enforce the no exit sign from the north end of the parking lot. This decision comes on the heels of Philadelphia Mayor Ed Rendell's being arrested by Villanova security for existing via that entrance after speaking at the law school. While Mayor Rendell was only temporarily detained, he was visibly upset and kept repeating "No, I am not drunk, Penn really can make it to the final four!" Rendell was unavailable for comments all over the place as they always do, with absolutely no respect for those people who honor the lounge. Only occasionally breaking down to drink out of a random trophy.

The new measures taken by the administration include posting a security guard at the entrance during the most frequently traveled hours, and installing the one-way drives as are now present at the adjoining exits. However, at the request of many students, the administration has opted for additional measures.

One such measure is that any person using the entrance incorrectly will be ticked $100 directly to their tuition. Moreover, any violation will result in mandatory attendance to all classes for the remaining semester, detention every day for two hours room, 2 loss of lounge privileges, a forced viewing of every released Barry video or every Sisters game, the violator must retake the legal research exam until every question in correctly answered, and finally, mandatory attendance to the 3-day seminar in Duluth, Minnesota on "Secrets and You, a learning process".

The administration believes that these measures will curb the abuse of the entrance and prevent any further accidents.

FTSP STAR - STICKMAN

Stickman, the star of the Faceless, Torsless, Stickpeople cartoon claims he’s more than just a comic of August, 1993 which launched him into stardom, “Fresh breath is a priority in my life.” The “Stick” realizes each comic he introduces the Steve Odabashian comic strip “FTSP”, and since that time, Stickman’s popularity has skyrocketed. This popularity, though, has not come without its price.

“Since the strip started, I have been offered numerous roles in cartoons and other simple comics in the future as he has recently hired 2L funnyman Steve “she likes me” Trevisan as a comic consultant. Stick feels that his comics have been poor lately due to his heartbreak with his girlfriend, Ruth Pientack, left school after his girlfriend, Ruth Pientack, left school last year. “I’m over Ruth now. The new name in my life is 2L who actually gets a “god bless you” from teachers when she enters. To protect her anonymity we’ll just call her D.”

Stickman promises brighter and better comics in the future.

the "additional and different" way to prepare for life!
SBA Buys Microwave, Other Appliances for Student Use.

by Ned Flanders,

Chris Pepe, Student Bar Association President announced today that the SBA has purchased many new appliances to place around the school for student use. The most obvious of these new purchases will be a microwave in the cafeteria for re-heating food. However, there are many other new items on the way.

Pepe noted that the lounge would soon become home to a few new pieces, including a new piano, some new lighting, and a 72 inch big screen T.V. with sega genesis. Also, the closet in the lounge is scheduled to be rebuilt into a meat locker. Pepe commented that fresh meat is so hard to come by these days, and that a meat locker will stop students from asking "Where's the beef?"

Other new plans include changing the mailroom into a coin-operated laundry room. Pepe stated that each load will only cost fifty cents, so students will save money by doing their laundry in the school, "and will also become more studious while they clean their clothes."

Student reaction to the new purchases was mixed. Brian Kloss (2L) stated that they felt the new T.V. was long over due, but why would anyone want to play sega. Kloss noted "especially that hockey game, you know some people do absolutely nothing put play that dumb game, like, get a life!"

The new student group, VERSA (The Vegetable Rights Student Association) claims that the SBA was discriminating when they decided to put a meat locker in the lounge, yet refused to address the problem of the lack of fresh vegetables. Officers of the group stated that they had proposed a plan to the SBA to convert part of the courtyard into a garden. Any student who wished to grow their own vegetables would have access to the garden. The SBA, however, rejected the idea for reasons which have not yet been made public.

For more information on the changes, contact the SBA.

Women's Law Caucus and Rugby Club to Merge

by Mr. Burns

In a sudden announcement, leaders of the Women's Law Caucus and the Rugby Club have decided to combine the two student groups to form the Gender-Neutral Rugby Caucus. The combination of the groups is to take effect at the outset of next semester.

Rugby Club spokesman Wil Greene stated that the move was partly political. "We needed to clean up our image as a bunch of drunk rugby-playing fools. Perhaps now people will see us in a different light." Greene also stated that he was looking forward to sharing rugby strategies with the new members.

Maria Fisher (3L) signs 10 day contract with the Sixers

by Manute Bol,

Maria Fisher, a third year at the Law School, recently signed a 10 day contract with the Philadelphia Sixers Basketball Organization to replace the loss of a true 2-guard on the bench. Fisher, at 6-5, has been a menace on the court for other Villanova intramurals team, and expects to do the same in the NBA.

The reason is that Fisher appears to be only inches above five feet tall, and on the court she easily fools opponents who think they are playing a much smaller adversary. In fact, Fisher towers over her opponents, often leaving them speechless, much less in the dust of her tracks.

Jack Zinman, Villanova basketball intramural King and member of the league champions, claims that Fisher is by far the most dominant player he has ever seen on any level. Zinman's teammates also agree that Fisher no doubt played down her abilities in order to let the champions repeat.

As for this intramural season, Fisher states that she intends to still try and make the games, but that the Sixers will have to take priority. Although none of the individual Sixers were available for comment, the team released a statement saying that they were pleased with the signing, and felt that Fisher would fill an important empty spot.

Critics claim that signing Fisher may even help the Sixers make a decent playoff spot, thereby losing any chance to receive a early draft selection.

PATEL NAMED NEW COMMISSIONER OF THE NBA

by David Stern

Although not confirmed by the National Basketball Association, Sud Patel (2L) has quit his job as co-commissioner of the Villanova Intramural League and has accepted the position of NBA commissioner. Supposedly, now commissioner David Stern intends to retire in the near future, and has been grooming Patel for the job.

Patel, in past interviews, has commented on his discontent with the Villanova system, and how he has not been able to make the league "reach its full potential." Now, perhaps, Patel will have the chance to institute some policies which the Villanova league did not allow.

Long time co-commissioner Mike Green also refused to comment on whether Patel was officially leaving, but did say that he was convinced that Patel would be a "perfect choice for the job. By the way, did I mention that Penn is going to the final four, I went to Penn you know..."

Villanova Golf Tournament to Raise Money for Purchase of 3rd Year Gift - Barleycorn's Pub

by Greg Norman

The golf tournament, scheduled for April, is expected to raise a substantial sum of the required amount.

Once purchased, the pub will be a private establishment for Villanova Law Students only, open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

MUNLEY BREAKS NUMEROUS BACKBOARDS - OWES $$

by Steve Alford

Until recently, Villanova Security had been perplexed with the destruction of numerous backboards at St. Mary's DuPont Pavilion, and Jake Nevin Arena. However, a suspect has now been charged with the damage.

Brian Munley (2L) admitted yesterday to purposely ripping down numerous rims and backboards throughout the university. Munley was fined $20,000 for the backboards, and was sentenced to three month without sega genesis or any televised sporting events.

The judge also determined that Munley actually did live in Pennsylvania, even though the bulk of his time has been spent in Massachusetts. As a result, Munley will have to remain in his state of domicile, Pennsylvania until he has paid for all the damage.

In a statement to the press, Munley apologized for his actions, claiming that he has no excuse, but "just wanted to know if I could do it." Munley also added that he has taken a part-time job as a chewing tobacco tester to try and pay off the damages as quickly as possible.

Villanova officially commented that they intended to take no further action against Munley, and plan to let him finish his education here.

Villanova 2L, Rich King

Implicated in RIDER Scandal.

by Ralph Sampson

Federal authorities just recently announced that before the 1993 Kentucky - Rider basketball game, there was a conspiracy to injure Kentucky star Jamaal Mashburn, now of the Dallas Mavericks. Along with this news came further charges that the same conspirators paid off Monmouth players in order to ensure Rider's trip to the NCAA Tournament, and intended to sabotage the University of Connecticut bus; their first round opponents.

Included in the list of suspects were Rich King, a second year student and graduate of Rider College. Also on the list were Jim King, former editor-in-chief of the Villanova Law Review, and Don King, boxing promoter.

Government officials claim that the three King's are actually relatives, and conspired to better Rider's basketball prowess at a family reunion held two years ago in New York.

Although official charges have yet to be filed, many people are convinced that all three are surely guilty. Many students have commented that King's outward enthusiasm for Rider was apparent in all aspects in his life. One friend, who wished to remain anonymous, stated that "He ate, drank, slept, and dreamed about Rider. He even considered changing his last name from King to Rider. He's a very sick man."

The FBI official in charge told the press that the FBI will soon be interrogating the victims of the King-conspiracy from the University of Connecticut were not phased by the news. UConn coach Jim Calhoun stated "We would have beaten them with our cheerleaders; let's face it, Rider is no Santa Clara!" Also ironic was the reaction of Jamaal Mashburn. Mashburn commented "I wish he would have nailed me, then I could have used my injury to get me on a team with some potential. Hell, I think even the Hansen Bros. could beat this team."

UConn is no match for Rider."

The whereabouts of Jim King of Don King are still not known at this time, although there are rumors circulating that Jim King is living in the Law Review office at Villanova Law School.

Surprisingly, the would-be victims of the King-conspiracy from the University of Connecticut were not phased by the news. UConn coach Jim Calhoun stated "We would have beaten them with our cheerleaders; let's face it, Rider is no Santa Clara!" Also ironic was the reaction of Jamaal Mashburn. Mashburn commented "I wish he would have nailed me, then I could have used my injury to get me on a team with some potential. Hell, I think even the Hansen Bros. could beat this team."
