OPINION OF THE COURT

RENDELL, Circuit Judge.

Appellants Mt. McKinley Insurance Company, Everest Reinsurance Company, Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, London, and certain London Market Companies (collectively "Appellants") appeal from the District Court's September 27, 2005 Memorandum Order, dismissing their appeal from the Bankruptcy Court's October 22, 2004 Revised Order Requiring Filing of Statements Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2019 ("Rule 2019 Order"). The District Court held that Appellants lacked standing to appeal the Bankruptcy Court’s Rule 2019 Order and, further, that the appeal was not ripe for review. For the reasons stated below, we will affirm.

DISCUSSION¹

This appeal centers around Bankruptcy Rule of Procedure 2019 (“Rule 2019”), which requires “every entity or committee representing more than one creditor or equity security holder” to file, inter alia, “a copy of the instrument, if any, whereby the entity . . . is empowered to act on behalf of creditors.” Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2019(a). The Bankruptcy Court fashioned an order that allowed law firms to file “exemplars” of their empowering documents and required anyone who wished to view the Rule 2019 submissions to file a motion with the court to gain permission. Upon appeal to the District Court, Appellants argued that the Bankruptcy Court erred in (1) failing to require strict compliance with Rule 2019 by authorizing the filing of exemplars, as opposed to actual copies, of the relevant empowering documents (hereinafter “strict compliance challenge”), and (2) permitting access to the Rule 2019 submissions only upon motion and order of the court (hereinafter “access challenge”).² Pittsburgh Corning Corporation, the Official ¹The facts underlying this dispute were well catalogued by the District Court in its September 27, 2005 Memorandum Order. See In re Pittsburgh Corning Corp., No. 2:04-cv-01814, slip. op. at 1-8 (W.D. Pa. Sept. 27, 2005) (“Dist. Ct. Op.”). As we write for the benefit of the parties alone, we include only those facts necessary for the disposition of this appeal. Our resolution of the issues was aided not only by a review of the record, briefs, and case law, but also by oral argument.

²We note that Appellants are not creditors of the Debtor and do not hold equity interests in the Debtor.

Committee of Asbestos Creditors, the Future Claimant’s Representative, Baron & Budd, P.C., and Silber Pearlman LLP (collectively “Appellees”) filed briefs in opposition.

On September 27, 2005, the District Court dismissed the appeal, holding that (1) Appellants lacked “aggrieved persons” standing to assert their access challenge, as they had “not yet sought access or been denied access” to the Rule 2019 submissions, Dist. Ct. Op. at 17; and (2) in the alternative, the matter itself was not ripe for review. The District Court failed, however, to address Appellants’ strict compliance challenge.

Because we find no error in the District Court’s resolution of Appellants’ access challenge, we will discuss it no further here. Thus, the only issue that remains is whether Appellants can pursue their strict compliance challenge. This involves a determination as to whether they are “persons aggrieved” vis a vis the non-access related aspects of the Bankruptcy Court’s Rule 2019 Order.³ We hold that they are not.

In order to have standing to appeal in the bankruptcy context, a party must meet ³While “[o]ur review of ripeness and standing determinations is plenary,” Presbytery of N.J. of Orthodox Presbyterian Church v. Florio, 40 F.3d 1454, 1462 (3d Cir. 1994), the question of whether someone is a “person aggrieved” is normally one of fact for the district court, reviewed for clear error, In re Combustion Engineering, Inc., 391 F.3d 190, 214 (3d Cir. 2004).

Though the District Court did not make a “persons aggrieved” finding with respect to Appellants’ strict compliance challenge, because the record contains the requisite facts, we find it proper to supplement the “persons aggrieved” finding, ab initio, on appeal. See In re Dykes, 10 F.3d 184, 188 (3d Cir. 1993) (“Because the relevant facts and necessary evidence are clearly before us and not in dispute, we consider it proper to address the issue ourselves.”). Were we to determine, however, that Appellants have standing to move forward with the remaining aspect of their appeal, we would remand to the District Court for consideration on the merits.

the “persons aggrieved” test. See, e.g., Dykes, 10 F.3d at 187. According to our precedent, “[l]itigants are ‘persons aggrieved’ if the [challenged bankruptcy] order diminishes their property, increases their burdens, or impairs their rights.”⁴ Id. “This restrictive approach to bankruptcy appellate standing contrasts with the broad right of participation in the early stages of a bankruptcy proceeding.” Combustion Eng’g, 391 F.3d at 214 n.21. Thus, while it may have been—and continue to be—appropriate for Appellants to participate in the underlying bankruptcy proceedings, they are nonetheless without standing to appeal from the Rule 2019 Order unless they can show that they are directly and adversely affected by that order. See id. at 215 (“[W]e have denied standing to parties involved in bankruptcy proceedings ‘who, even though they may be exposed to some potential harm incident to the bankruptcy court’s order, are not ‘directly affected’ by that order.’” (quoting Travelers, 45 F.3d at 741)). We hold that they are not so affected.

Appellants simply have not explained how the Rule 2019 Order—the only order from which they appeal—directly aggrieves them. Though they vaguely argue that the Rule 2019 Order limits their rights “by preventing them from obtaining information that could reveal unethical procedures or conflicts of interests on the part of plaintiffs’ lawyers” (Appellants’ Br. 36), Appellants merely speculate that there are any unethical procedures or conflicts of interest to reveal.⁵ They do not point us to even one actual ethical violation or conflict of interest extant in the filings and have failed to investigate these issues so as to support their contention.⁶

Appellants also lodge what appears to be a collateral attack on the Plan itself, alleging that “the Plan seeks to prejudice Appellants” (Appellants’ Br. 3) and that, if confirmed, the Plan “would strip Appellants of their contractual right to investigate and withhold payment of . . . improper or even fraudulent asbestos claims” (id. at 2). As Appellants are well aware, this is not the appropriate time, nor the appropriate avenue, for ⁵Appellants contend that, were they to have access to the Rule 2019 disclosures and were those disclosures to uncover fraud and/or a conflict of interest, Appellants would have a basis upon which to invalidate the ballots voted on the Second Amended Plan of Reorganization (“the Plan”) or to sanction offending counsel. While we express no opinion as to whether Appellants would have “aggrieved persons” standing to challenge these orders, we note that no appeal has been taken from: (1) the Bankruptcy Court’s May 11, 2004 order, denying the Certain Underwriters at Lloyd’s London and Certain London Market Insurers’ Motion to Determine Standing or in the Alternative to Intervene, insofar as it alleged standing and/or intervention regarding the ballots of the Plan; and (2) the Bankruptcy Court’s November 2, 2004 order, denying the Certain Underwriters at Lloyd’s London and Certain London Market Insurers’ request to invalidate ballots for failure to comply with Rule 2019 and denying, without prejudice, their request for sanctions for failure to comply with Rule 2019.

⁶For this reason, this case is distinguishable from In re Congoleum, 426 F.3d 675 (3d Cir. 2005)—upon which Appellants so heavily rely—as the facts necessary to find that an actual conflict of interest existed had already been developed and left no room for speculation.

challenging the substance of the Plan.⁷ The harm alleged is simply too far removed from the 2019 Order and too speculative at this point in the proceedings to be the basis for appellate standing. Accordingly, as Appellants cannot demonstrate that they are “persons aggrieved,” we conclude that they do not have standing to challenge the Bankruptcy Court’s Rule 2019 Order.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, we will affirm the order of the District Court.

⁷We note that the Bankruptcy Court has denied confirmation of the Plan and is now considering motions for reconsideration.
